Navigating The Future

Schreiber Pediatric Rehab Center was greatly affected by our country’s economic troubles this year, like most other non-profit organizations. To continue to fulfill its mission of providing family-centered therapy and education programs for infants, children and adolescents with disabilities, developmental delays and acquired injuries in Lancaster County and surrounding areas, the Center had to chart new territory.

One of the ways Schreiber Pediatric had to get creative involved finding a new way to provide at-home services to the Center's youngest clients, children from birth to age three. The Commonwealth of Pennsylvania requires Schreiber Pediatric to work with these children in their “natural environment” like their home or daycare. This requirement forces therapists to travel extensively, with the Center’s therapists regularly exceeding half a million miles per year, and individual therapists often logging over 1,000 miles a month. When the Commonwealth decided to discontinue reimbursement for this travel time, while continuing to mandate the travel, Schreiber Pediatric was faced with a significant financial burden.

Inspired by the persistence and determination of the children the Center serves, Schreiber Pediatric found a way to overcome this challenge. With the help of local legislators, especially Representative True, the Center was able to get special permission from the Commonwealth and Lancaster County to restructure the way scheduling is done for at-home treatment in a way that reduced the therapists' travel time and substantially increased overall efficiency.

Schreiber Pediatric weathered another storm this year when United Way of Lancaster County announced a fourth consecutive decline in its funding of the Center. Again, Schreiber Pediatric held tight to the helm and refused to allow these additional budget constraints prevent it from providing top-notch care to the children it serves. Instead, Schreiber Pediatric tightened its fiscal belt, amended attendance and cancellation policies, and undertook the other steps necessary to continue its nearly seventy-five year tradition of caring for the children of Lancaster County. The Center now serves nearly 4,000 children each year.

It was smoother sailing in January, when Schreiber Pediatric was again recognized for its outstanding rehabilitative services by being reaccredited by the Commission on Accreditation of Rehab Facilities (CARF), making the Center one of only six CARF-accredited pediatric rehabilitation centers in the United States. CARF further distinguished Schreiber Pediatric by designating several of its programs and practices as “exemplary” and giving it the ‘Aspire to Excellence’ award in recognition of “leadership that embraces accountability and responsibility for the organization’s mission.” These are all great honors and testify to the quality and dedication of the Center’s staff and volunteers, and led to Schreiber Pediatric being honored by the state legislature at its May 4th session and also by Lancaster County’s Commissioners.

Be it fair weather or foul, Schreiber Pediatric holds true both to its charitable mission and to the children it serves in Lancaster County and surrounding areas. It has done this for nearly seventy-five years, and will continue to do so. Thank you to the Board of Directors, staff, parents, children, volunteers and supporters who have made Schreiber Pediatric what it is today — one of the country's premier pediatric rehabilitation centers.
